

honeymooners

Who wants to honeymoon in Vegas?

After a week or long weekend of hectic wedding activities, you have the best place to relax right at your fingertips! The City-by-the-Sea and its surrounding communities have myriad activities to help you unwind post-wedding, as well as gorgeous beaches and cozy hotel rooms to allow the best year-round relaxation. Leave it to Ann Petronio of Annie's Escapes, and Angela Grandchamp of Middletown Cruise & Travel, to give the best advice for honeymooning newlyweds.

{ Snowden / McGregor wedding, see p. 68 }

- » Don't rush out of town. An immediate getaway is tempting, but your family and friends are rarely in the same place at the same time. Schedule your adventure for a few days after the wedding so you can spend time with them before you leave. Rates tend to be better mid-week as well.
- » Don't plan something that's too busy. Everyone underestimates how exhausted you'll be after all the festivities.
- » Plan a new experience together. It will be a journey that you'll both cherish forever.
- » Save the best for last. You never want to stay in a luxurious place at the beginning and then crash at a motel the last night to save money. So stay in the nicest hotel, and eat the biggest meal at the end.
- » Cover yourself. Have a backup plan if you're planning a very weather dependent trip or activity.
- » Watch your budget and book in advance for best rates and availability.

More honeymoon tips at NewportWeddingMagazine.com